DORCHESTER MAN'S REVENGE FOR REFUSAL TO WED FOR KILLED

TROLLEYS GRAB COST $141,000

William F. Kelley, a Congress street broker, because the new figure of money in the ledger into the affairs of the New Haven Railroad system at the Interstate Commerce Commission hearing today.

It was brought out that the New Haven paid Kelley $141,000. General Counsel E. D. Robbins of the road, who was on the witness stand, said that it was payment for stock held by Kelley in connection with getting control of trolley lines in Connecticut. A letter signed by President Charles S. Meritt said the money was paid to Kelley for "commission."

Denied at Kelley Offices.

At the offices of Mr. Kelley, No. 8 Congress street, it was stated that no amount proximately the equivalent of the sum named was received by Mr. Kelley in bonds of the New Haven Road about eight years ago for the sale of three trolley lines in Connecticut. It was denied definitely that the money was for commission on sales of stock.

William F. Kelley resides at No. 49 Washington avenue, North Cambridge. He is a trustee of the Boston & Worcester Electric Companies, of the Cambridge Hospital and of the Massachusetts Electric Company. He is also a director of the Manchester Fraction, Light & Power Company.

Harvard and Yale Deal.

The inside story of how President Robbins, through the legal advice of Counsel Robbins, brought about the sending of the patient passenger steamers Harvard and Yale to the Pacific—there by leaving the Boston and New York transportation field in the hands of the New Haven—was told by Attorney Louis D. Brandeis at the hearing today.

His statement was made during a clash with Mr. Robbins. Attorney Brandeis charged that:

"In a conference in the New Haven office on November 16, 1909, President Robbins received a proposition from a Mr. McGowan in California, broker to do away with the Metropolitan line."

McGowan was to send the steamers to the Pacific.

Robbins was present at the conference as counsel for the New Haven and that President Robbins instructed Mr. Robbins to prepare a plan whereby this could be brought about. Robbins suggested that he be permitted to do this.

Trial of W. M. Wood, head of Wool Trust, to Begin May 19

William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Company; Fred E. Atwood, a Boston manufacturer of chemicals and dyes; and Dennis J. Collins, a Cambridge dog fancier, are to go on trial in the Suffolk Superior Criminal Court on Monday, May 19, on a charge of conspiracy to plant dynamite in Lawrence during the textile strike.

Wood was indicted last August. Since that time a number of conferences have taken place between District Attorney Pelletier and counsel for the defendants. The last of these conferences occurred today, when the date for the trial was set.

The case will probably be heard by Judge Brown in the first session of the court, and it is expected the trial will last a week or more. District Attorney Pelletier and Assistant District Attorney A. C. Webber will appear for the government. The defendants will be represented by Attorneys Samuel L. Powers, Daniel H. Oakley and Henry T. Harbord.

ANTI-JAP RAIL S PASSED

SACRAMENTO, Cal., May 3.—The Senate by a vote of 82 to 2 early today passed the Railroad-Thompson bill prohibiting the ownership of land for agricultural purposes in California by alien residents. The measure permits a five-year leasehold by aliens. It was adopted after an all-night session.

Secretary of State Bryan had vetoed when the result was announced.

The Senate's action is in the name of a compromise. The Railroad-Thompson measure is less effective against the Japanese than the Webb bill, as it voted by Governor Johnson. The bill permits the spread of Japanese farming colonies.

Consideration of the bill was begun at 11 o'clock yesterday morning and on Tuesday without recess even for luncheon and dinner. The hardest fight was around a resolution introduced by Senator Curtis calling for "the" "the" "the" to delay action for two years, but it was defeated. In the closing hours of the debate on the bill itself Senators Stanford, Candler and Shafter introduced to invoke the referendum as they believed the people of the State were pleading for relief from the Japanese.

The principal provisions of the bill follow:

Any alien eligible to become a citizen may have the same right to hold land as citizens.

All other aliens are limited to such rights as are conferred upon them by treaties in existence between the United States and the particular nation from which the alien comes. In the case of Japanese the bill prohibits ownership of agricultural lands, but permits them to own residences, factories and shops.

The lease of agricultural lands by such aliens are limited to periods not to exceed three years.

Aliens who cannot become citizens cannot inherit lands. They may, however, receive money from the estate of the lands after the death of the alien.

The State reserves the right to make all laws relating with the acquisition of lands by aliens.

Present holders of aliens are not affected except that they cannot be granted or sold to other ineligible citizens.

INEZ MILHOLLAND, grand marshal of the big suffrage parade in New York this afternoon.

MISS MILHOLLAND HEADS 30,000 IN "VOTES" PARADE

NEW YORK, May 3.—Police precautions of an exceptional nature were taken today by Police Commissioner McAdams to protect the 30,000 women suffrage parade. The parade was held on Fifth avenue.

In order to prevent any possibility of trouble such as followed the women suffrage parade last year, the Police Commissioner detailed an army of foot and mounted police to guard the marchers. Orders were given to arrest any person making remarks offensive to the suffragists.

Four inspectors and 1,200 patrolmen were assigned to guard the line of march. Inspector W. J. Ladd was put in charge of the men guarding the starting point at Washington square and Captain Alfred Thayer, a veteran, was assigned to guard the reviewing stand. Inspector Sawyer was put in charge at Carnegie hall.

Right turns of yellow, blue, purple, green and white dresses in the long line of marchers. Twenty-four women rode the float.

They marched under the banner of the National Woman's Party. A smaller group were with the W. P. U. and a few men walked with their wives in the Royal Franchise Society parade.

WOUNDS SELF; BOTH MAY DIE

James Callahan, forty-five, a traveling salesman, of No. 55 Port Norfolk street, Dorchester, enraged because his fiancée, Miss Johanna Bradley of No. 131 Wrentham street, Dorchester, would not leave her aged father and marry him, fired five shots, fatally wounding her. He sent the remaining bullet crashing through his right temple in the parlor of the Bradley home today.

BOTH NEAR DEATH AT HOSPITAL.

Both are at the City Hospital, where they are expected to live.

The double shooting took place in the Bradley home at 9:15 a. m. today. It followed a discussion they had over their intended marriage. They were in the parlor at the time.

Miss Bradley and James Callahan were both near death at the City Hospital. Miss Bradley was wounded in the chest, while Callahan was wounded in the head. Both were expected to live.

Callahan, who had been with her for twenty years, had become a victim of the drug habit to obtain relief from rheumatism, from which he had suffered for a year.

He had communicated with her and told him if he compared the bullet he would marry him. Last night Callahan remained at the Bradley home. Today this morning he went into the parlor, Callahan received his request that Miss Bradley marry him.

"I'll marry you just as soon, Jim, as you are sure you have got the best of your habits," she said. "It will be only a little while, I am sure."

MILWAUKEE, May 3.—Arthur Goannitti, one of the leaders of the I. W. W., was fined $10 in the district court for leading and organizing a parade in Hope street, his connection with the larger all strike.

He was also held in $500 for his appearance at Worcester Monday.

Pretty Girl Is Killed by Portland Express at Salem

SALEM, May 3.—A pretty girl, about nineteen, well dressed and unattended, was struck near the railroad station today by the express from Portland, Me., to Boston, and received injuries from which she died in her last hour at Salem Hospital.

The girl, wearing a bright red dress, got off a local train and started to cross the railroad tracks near "The Tunnel" just as the express came in. Some one shouted a warning and she hesitated an instant. The next moment she was under the overhanging of the locomotive and was dragged for forty feet and the roller under the wheels just as the engineer brought the train to a stop.

As people at the station picked up her mangled body she cried out, "My God! What have I done." Her left leg was severed and her right leg and the lower part of her body were terribly crushed. She lost consciousness and remained in that condition until she died.

Relative Heard Shots.

Mrs. Timothy Bradley, a sister-in-law, who occupies the second floor of the Bradley home, heard the shots.

She ran to the street and found a passing man. Both were late into the home.

East Wind Puts Early Chill On Warmest May 3

Today started out to be a record-breaker in Spring warmth, but the East wind put the mercury to rest and cooled it.

The local thermometer went up to 70 degrees by 10 a. m., which was the highest May 3 reading for Boston since 1903.

The weather was allowed that it might be the warmest May 3 in weather bureau history before the end of the year.

Just then the East Wind came around the corner and blew a bit of chilly Atlantic Ocean temperature all over the city.

Nevertheless, the weather was very favorable for the day, with light, variable winds.

By L. R. MURDOCH.
With the series split half and half and with Walter Johnson up his managerial sleeve, as it were, Clark Griffith has taken a bold stand. If that were not advantage enough for the man from Washington, he has Stahl playing with three-fourths of his world's championship and his star pitcher out of the game. If Coach Mack had all that bit his lack of the ear in one walling good night!

The Red Sox played the most of the first two games of the Washington series with only five men of the combination that brought home the bacon in the winning games last October. Cady, Gardner, Hooper, Speaker and Lewis were the five who played through the two Washington games and the world's series.

Yesterday Stahl had Leonard pitching seven innings and Enloe, Ball and Janvry in the infield. For the greater part of Thursday's game he had the same infield combination at work, with "Buck"

May Hold Johnson Over.

It is unlikely that Walter Johnson will start today. Unless Griffith changes his mind later, he will follow the wise course of keeping the BIG NOISE in reserve, ready to jump in late this afternoon if, by so doing, he can pull a game out of the fire or hold one in which the Senators already have an advantage. This would keep Johnson hovering over the heads of the Red Sox for what discouraging effect that might have, and have him ready to step in at any time to help the Senators. Which would be considerable encouragement to them. If he worked a few innings today he could come back Monday.

There is also a danger combination. Of course, managers rarely care for the safe money, but know that "griff" believes that a Saturday engagement between Red and Senators means a bumper crowd anyway, while Johnson as a headliner would likely boost the Monday figures immensely. You know, everybody wants to see the human attraction in action, even if it does mean we lose.

Fitchburg, Clinton and Leominster in New League

FITCHBURG, May 3.—A three-team league has been organized to include Fitchburg, Leominster and Clinton. According to plans mapped out by the managers of the three teams, the three-circuit league will start about May 24, and 25 cents admission will be charged to all games.

Patrick Dowd of Worcester was elected president of the league and the directors chosen are Thomas Sellers of Fitchburg, W. A. Polley of Clinton and Roy A. Savage of Leominster. It has been voted that no team can take players from other teams in the league without the consent of the league, and it was decided also to divide the Fitchburg, Leominster and Clinton into two equal halves.

Fitchburg, Leominster and Clinton each have a good, fast semi-professional league team. Fitchburg opened the season last Saturday by defeating the Brockton team of the New England League.

In past years Leominster has had three good semi-professional teams, which have had a town series of games. The best players of these teams will be organized into one baseball club. Guy A. Savage, a Leominster newspaperman, will be manager.

BASEBALL CHATTER

The Senators again today.

The Giants lost to the Phillies yesterday and are now repeating in third place.

Boston, the recruit of the White Sox at first place, continues to show little sign of having attained two more hits yesterday.

After nearly one month at the helm Frank Chance of the Yankees has become convinced that the reason his team has won only two in three games is because it lacks ability. A big shakedown will result in the release of many of his players is expected very shortly.

The Senators outbatted the Red Sox almost 2 to 1 yesterday, but had a mighty hard job winning a 5 to 4 victory.

Pittsburgh broke its losing streak yesterday by smothering hits in the game against the Cardinals.

Chapman, the Nap shortstop, stole third and scored in the game with St. Louis yesterday.

Louis yesterday. Jackson, Lajoie, Land and Chapman drove out a pair of hits apiece and the Naps won easily.

The Yankees lost again yesterday, the Athletics noting them out 8 to 5.

The Cubs victory yesterday gave them a fourth hold at first place in the National League.

Mann, the new outfielder of the Boston Pilgrims, cracked out a home run with two on bases after the eighth inning, enabling his team to beat the Dodgers.

The White Sox, without the services of Big Ed Walsh, are doing quite well, thank you. They're now twelve out of twenty starts.

Ty Cobb's batting average for the four times in which he has participated since he got into the game is now something like .400. In making apologetic for a poor record, he writes to state that he expects to hit much better when he gets in practice again.

BROOKLYN, April 3.—The Boston Pilgrims are confident that they will defeat the Dodgers again today. Yesterday's victory has put new life into the team led by Manager George Stallings.

The Bostonians played a fast, snappy game yesterday, but it is a well known fact that they are just as liable to give a poor exhibition of the national game as they are a good one.

This is the reason why Brooklyn "fans" believe that Dahlen's men will win today. The Dodgers are now in the first division and intend to stay there. The only way that they can make certain of retaining their present position is by defeating the Hub team today.

Not much will probably result for Brooklyn today. If the great left-hander is not just right, Dahlen will pluck his loupes on "Curly" Hilt's. Hilt is expected to do the honors on the mound for Boston, and when he is right he is a hard man to beat.

The Pilgrims won yesterday by the score of 4 to 1, after a great pitchers' battle between "Lefty" Tyler and Allen. With the score, 3 to 1 in the first half of the ninth inning, Mann, Boston's new outfielder, hit a liner to centre field with two men on. Stengel misjudged the ball and his men went for a home run.

ANDOVER BATTLES N. H. STATE NINE

ANDOVER, May 3.—Andover will play its second game of the season on Brothers Field today, when it will battle the New Hampshire State College. Coach O'Brien will probably use the lineup of Andover in the box, with Sharpe, Sweet and Grant the reserve. Captain Wiley will do the backstop work.

JONES-KIVIAT
RACE PLANNED
FOR JUNE 12

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.
(Quarter Mile Champion of United States and Canada.)

Lawson Robertson, coach of the Irish-American A. C. of New York, is credited with the statement that Abel R. Kiviat, the miller who represents that club, is able to give John Paul Jones, the great Cornell distance runner, a handcap of 100 yards and still defeat him.

When questioned about this, Robertson replied, "I don't recall having said this, but it goes, nevertheless, as I consider that Kiviat could compete Jones and MacArthur." Robertson then added, "In other words that Kiviat, when running at his best, is capable of doing close to 4 minutes 12 seconds for the full mile."

The Irish American Club, which usually sponsors the annual mile race, has been carefully going forward with arrangements to have Jones, Kiviat and Robertson meet at the annual meet of the New York A. C. race which will take place on June 12.

If this race is held on the Traverses following the 100-yard race, it will be a record breaker. Jack Monkley, who is training Cornell, has said nothing about competing in the mile race.

York A. C. has flatly refused to listen to any such arrangements as the games in question are run solely for amusement for the members and no admission is charged.

Owing to the fact that Kiviat refused to compete in the indoor games of the winged foot club, he is not any too popular with the officials of the New York A. C. The Irish-American A. C. would cheerfully finance such a meeting at its track on Long Island, for if this race took place on a Sunday over 30,000 "fans" would take in the race, for

It is a popular meeting place for track athletes and is well supported. It is to be regretted, however, that Jones does not fancy running under such conditions, but it is not too much to suppose that if the National A. A. U. championships are held early in the summer the Cornell record holder will oppose Kiviat in the mile run for the championship of this country.

Although much has been said about these two runners, little hope is held that Taber, the Brown track captain, will be able to successfully challenge either of them over the mile distance. Talier is, however, training faithfully himself as a miler and this confidence is a great asset in a race of this kind.

NEW HAVEN'S $100,000 CONSTITUTIONAL LEGISLATURE

mitted to secure the same results in another and legal way.

Three freight steamers were sent by the New Haven and the Atlantic and Yale were sent to the Pacific as the result of the conference.

Four Companies in One.

The deal was traced through four transactions—the original Morse company, a second company formed under the laws of Maine which took over the first company, a third company formed under the laws of New Jersey that acquired the first two, and finally a fourth company formed under the laws of Maine. All these companies retained the name "Metropolitan Steamship Company."

Attorney Braden put this question to Mr. Robbins as to whether or not the deal was legal. "We're not present at the deal," he said. "We're not present at the deal."

"Robbins," he said, "I remember now something about this deal."

Then jumping to his feet, Mr. Robbins exclaimed: "Waterbury was done absolutely right. I have signed under oath that the New Haven has no interest in the Metropolitan line. Again I declare the statement untrue."

Robbins then asked Mr. Robbins: "Is it a fact that you had information from Mr. Metcalf to acquire the Metropolitan line?"

Robbins then asked Mr. Metcalf: "Is it a fact that you had information from Mr. Metcalf to acquire the Metropolitan line?"

In beginning the questioning of Mr. Robbins, Mr. Metcalf said that he had no connection with the New Haven traffic.

Mr. Robbins then asked Mr. Metcalf: "Is it a fact that you had information from Mr. Metcalf to acquire the Metropolitan line?"

THE LOWEST PRICES ON TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

Stock markets were dull and prices ranged lower today. In most instances changes were small and had little significance. Trading was almost wholly confined to the London market. The time of the London market was less cheerful and there was a disposition there to await Balkan developments. Foreign influences were of little value on this side.

In Boston the most interest was taken in the early decline of the two points in Boston Elevated. The loss was made up, however, and the market ended on a level. The New York market was fairly steady. Wall Street lost two points, and higher copper ended work. The four improved in the last hour.

The New York market was featureless and featureless. Stocks showed a decline of a quarter of a point lower on the average. American bonds were steady. Steel, United States, Amalgamated, and others were steady. Canadian Pacific recovered some of its early loss, but was unchanged on the effect upon European business.

New York Market Opens Weaker. Prices were lower when the New York market opened. Most active issues were suffering declines. Berlin was held responsible for the drop of 2 1/2 points in Canadian Pacific. The market was steady. The New York market was fairly steady. Wall Street lost two points, and higher copper ended work. The four improved in the last hour.

Among the losses in the earliest movement were: Canadian Pacific, 1/2 point; Amalgamated Copper, 1/2 point; United States Steel, 1/2 point; and others. The market was steady. FOUR VOLUMES OF KNOWLEDGE OFFERED TODAY

Readers of the Boston AMERICAN who did not take advantage of the big book bargain yesterday can get the books today at this office.

Thousands of our readers who have already got their sets are most enthusiastic in their praise, and all agree that it is by far the greatest book bargain ever offered.

Everybody's Cyclopaedia is complete in five volumes, bound in beautiful cloth, and the regular selling price is $12 per set.

This great reference work treats 25,000 subjects in all branches of knowledge. It is a chronological history of the world from the beginning of all history down to the present. It contains educational charts which record the progress of the entire world.

The five volumes are profusely illustrated with the most expensive color plates and numerous engravings as well as text illustrations.

Now orders will be filled, but, as the sets are too bulky to be sent (though the single volumes may be sent), we have them for $12.00, the set to be sent by express in special charge to be paid by the receiver.

55,000 MEN OUT IN WALES COAL STRIKE

AT THE

HENRY F. MILLER PIANO-WAREROOMS

395 Boylston Street

In addition to our own HENRY F. MILLER PIANOS we are selling

NEW PIANOS OF OTHER MAKES

$175, $185, $190, $200, $210, $225, $235, $250, $275, $285

THESE PIANOS AND THESE PRICES are creating a sensation in the piano trade of Boston, because they are the same makes of pianos that many dealers elsewhere are asking from $275 to $425 for.

WE ARE PERFECTLY FAMILIAR with the extensively advertised "sales" carefully designed to sell cheap pianos at "fat" prices to unsuspecting buyers. It is within our definite knowledge that practically every "sale" masquerading under the guise of "Piano Clubs," "Piano Puzzle Contests," "Piano Guessing Contests," "Piano Introduction Sales," has been a deliberate attempt to unload on the public a grade of piano which, while represented to be worth $350 or $400, was not so good a piano in any sense as we offer at $175.

WE WANT TO DO ALL WE CAN to protect the public against misrepresentation of piano values, and to that end are offering various makes of desirable pianos at from $175 to $285 which we guarantee are not excelled in value at the prices asked in any piano store anywhere in the United States.

WE PARTICULARLY INVITE the modest buyer—the buyer with only a small sum to invest—to visit our warerooms and look over our pianos and the prices tagged thereon. Don't sit at home and be "convinced." Look always to the integrity and established reliability of those with whom you trade. Consider quality first and price afterward.

"Massachusetts, There She Stands"

This State Should Be So Represented at the Panama-Pacific Exposition That We May All Be Proud. What Is the Best Plan? The AMERICAN Invites Its Readers to Send Their Suggestions to the Editor.

"Massachusetts, there she stands!"

Ever since Daniel Webster pictured the Bay State in those four words, it has been enough, when comparing this State with others, merely to remark, "Massachusetts, there she stands!"

This Commonwealth has been the American standard of Statehood. The constitution, the laws, the institutions, the schools and the business methods of Massachusetts have been the approved American models.

Massachusetts has the most commanding of all the sites on the exposition grounds at San Francisco. She is richest in her history and traditions. She is wealthiest in her reputation for art, letters and jurisprudence. Only three other States in the country surpass her in industrial and commercial standing, and those States have appropriated $700,000, $500,000 and $450,000 for State buildings and reception purposes.

It will not be necessary for Massachusetts to spend anything like any of those sums for a State building, but it will be necessary, in order that the citizens of this Commonwealth may say with pride when they go to the exposition, "Massachusetts, there she stands," that something typical of the old Bay State, something peculiar to Massachusetts, something distinct from other official State representations, be planned for Massachusetts.

The idea of reproducing the old Bulfinch front of the State House has been abandoned by the Board of Panama-Pacific Managers, because to do it with any degree of fidelity would mean an enormous outlay of money. The estimate of the committee appointed by the Boston Society of Architects, comprised of three of the leading architects of the State, is wholly out of the question.

But these gentlemen have substituted some very excellent suggestions. They have mentioned the Dorothy Quincy House at Quincy, the Royal House at Medford, the Longfellow House at Cambridge, the Wayside Inn at Sudbury, as models that might be followed with beautiful and beneficial effect.

The Newburyport Herald has come to the front with an ideal suggestion. That newspaper would have a Massachusetts village green transplanted to California. It would have the State building headquarters in an old colonial mansion, setting back on one side a model old town hall of Massachusetts. Fronting on another side, it would have the old Massachusetts village schoolhouse.

There is inspiration in that suggestion. It has met with a great deal of approval from newspapers all over the State. It has aroused much interest in the question: How shall Massachusetts be represented at the great Panama-Pacific Exposition?

The AMERICAN suggests a reproduction of the Harvard yard, with the college buildings: Gray, Matthews, Harvard, Massachusetts, Stoughton and University Halls. The Massachusetts exhibits could be classified and divided among these several halls.

Harvard is the oldest and greatest university in America. Her sons have given their lives in every contest which the country has waged. On the green before her law school and gymnasium a stone marks the spot where the patriots knelt at midnight to hear the President of Harvard pray for their success before they marched to Bunker Hill, to fight the first pitched battle of the Revolution.

This is a possible feat, though it may not be the best suggestion. But it shows what a wealth of subjects Massachusetts can offer for the pleasure and profit of these hundreds of thousands of pilgrims who will journey to see this stupendous Exposition.

The Boston AMERICAN cordially invites its readers to send in their ideas on this question. They will be a great benefit to the Board of Managers for Massachusetts and of assistance to the members of the Legislature in deciding in what way and how well the grand old Commonwealth shall be represented at this greatest of international concourses.

How Do You Like the Japanese Picture on This Page?

The People of San Francisco DON'T LIKE IT AT ALL. Therefore They Will Not Permit It to Become a Reality

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

The western coast of the United States MUST remain European in population or become Asiatic.

The picture of California and other Western States as they would appear if certain ignorant learned college professors and others had their way is shown on this page.

You can't mix old and new.

You can't mix the Oriental and the Occidental races.

If you let the Japs come in, they will drive the white people out, just as surely as the red foxes drive out the grey foxes, just as surely as the red squirrels drive out the grey squirrels.

The question is not whether the red squirrel is better than the grey, or the red fox better than the grey.

The fact is THAT THE INTELLIGENT GREY FOX WOULD KEEP OUT THE RED FOX AND PROTECT ITSELF.

And the intelligent white race will keep out the brown race, the yellow race, and protect itself.

There is no unfriendly feeling toward the Japanese. They may take it as a compliment, if they choose, that they are not allowed to colonize this country.

Let them, if they wish it, declare that they are too able for us, too noble, that we cannot compete with them.

Let them say whatever they like, BUT LET THEM UNDERSTAND THAT THIS COUNTRY WILL REMAIN EUROPEAN IN POPULATION, AND WILL NOT BECOME JAPANESE.

Japanese things are very pretty and odd.

Japanese coins that can work for ten cents a day and live on six cents are very interesting and profitable. Some American employers would like to have them.

High flown, sentimental theories about the rights of man are charming.

BUT THE JAPANESE ARE NOT GOING TO PAINT ON THE COAST OF CALIFORNIA ANY SUCH PICTURE AS YOU SEE ON THIS PAGE. AND THAT IS A FACT, AND NOBODY IN WASHINGTON OR IN OKENAWA WILL CHANGE THAT FACT.

How Do You Think This Would Look?

This is the way California would soon appear if the little Americans ever succeeded in giving Japanese influence an unrestricted field.

Woman's Life Search for Values

By ADA PATTERSON

THE other day a woman killed herself, and to those given over about her bedside in a vain effort to save her life she said: "I didn't know the real thing from the phony until too late!"

The dying words of the poor, painted creature, self-slain, despairing, anxious to leave a world in which she had allowed herself to be cheated, are a message to every woman, whatever her age or station, whatever her gifts, her outlook or her problems.

World a Big Department Store, and We the Shoppers.

The world is a great department store, and we are the shoppers.

Woman's life is a search for values. The woman whose life ended in the suicide ward of one of the city hospitals was a bad shopper. At the bargain counter, in search of benefits, she had selected what was worthless, discarded what was worthy.

"The power of living a beautiful life dwells in the soul," said Marcus Aurelius, "and consists in indifference to those things which are different."

The young girl peeps into her mirror, and discovers with a thrill of pride that she had suddenly, mysteriously, become pretty of face and pleasing of figure, that the sallowness and awkwardness of yesterday have gone somewhere, somehow, that she is growing up and has dominion in a new, strange land, the land of admiration.

Hovering timidly, fascinatedly, at life's bargain counter, she is the great danger, the greatest danger that besets a woman's life—that of not knowing the worthy from what is worthless.

The stranger, who twirls his cane with one hand and pulls his mustache with the other, while he ogles her, she may, because this shopping is so new to her, mistake her for something genuine and worth while.

Real Value in Department of Hearts Is True Love.

If she watched him saunter a block further and would see the same twirling of the light cane, the same pulling at a feeble mustache, the same rolling of shallow eyes at every pretty girl he met. Worthless goods! The only search with a second's consideration is the one who does not ogle, but who, looking with true, steady eyes into your own, asks the only honest question: "Will you be my wife?"

Yet every day, every hour of the day, we see girls confusing small values. They mistake general admiration for love. They think they want general admiration.

Perhaps they do want it, but the only real value to be found in the department of hearts is not the admiration, but love. Love of general admiration is the commonest mistake of women. Homes are broken by it. Lives are shattered by it. Yet, maddened by the rush of other women to the bargain counter, many shoppers pay the last penny of their womanhood for what is worse than worthless.

To be admired one moment and forgotten the next is the lot of the woman who cares only for admiration. The honest love of a good man is the only article at that counter worth a thought.

In Her Search for Values She Takes Her Brains to Market.

In her search for values a woman who takes her brains with her to market wants to buy a home. She may begin with a furnished room. She may grow out of this into a wee flat of her own. But if her mind sits steadily on its throne, there is a healthy hunger in her that will not be stilled—the hunger for a permanent home into which she can build herself and her family. That home will be to her an expression of themselves and a growing ground for every innateness of it, a place for character growth and upbuilding.

Seeking for values, the perennities of life, she finds that honest, cheerful work, and plenty of it, is one of them, and good will is another.

Theidler always makes a poor bargain. He gives his time and gets nothing. The worker gives his energy and receives the comfortable assurance of having done his best. The joys of love intoxicate, exhilarate and pass. The consciousness of having done your best with the talents granted you by nature is a permanent sunning of the soul. The thorn in many a deathbed has been the thought: "I have thrown away my talents; I have wasted my life."

There is plenty of sentiment in the world, and in human hearts. If directed into right channels, the world's need is rather the ballast of practical common sense than of flight-provoking sentiment.

But there is no doubt that every life is better and more profitable for the cultivation of a spirit of good will. The hypocritical woman a stultifies herself.

She forms the habit of studying life through a microscope. She becomes a fault hunter. The best definition I have ever heard of a friend is that he is one who is in and out of season wishes you well. That is a good attitude to take toward life, toward people, toward the world, of wishing them well.

The difference between the magnetic and unmagnetic person is simply in this atmosphere of thought. We are attracted by the person who wills good will, and are repelled by one who is indifferent or malicious.

Woman Who Gains the Love of a Good Man Is a Good Shopper.

The woman who has gotten from life's bargain counter the love of a good man; if they have bought, or are in the way of buying, a home, be it ever so little, or their own; if she is developing to the uttermost her talent, be it for raising healthy babies or singing in grand opera; if she has the soul sunshine which follows general good will, she knows values. She has proven herself a good shopper.

Reads the AMERICAN "Because the AMERICAN Is Not Afraid"

The clipping referred to in the following letter was headed: "Representative Charles L. Underhill is Fighting Pure Food Legislation—Do You Wonder Why?"

CHAS. E. JUDKINS, New England Agent, 30 Canal St., Boston.

Gentlemen—The enclosed clipping is the finest thing I have ever seen in a daily newspaper. It is more than good. You ought to have gone a bit further and given his address and district. I've been asked why I read every edition of the AMERICAN, and I always answer, because I get all the truth and all the facts. The AMERICAN is not afraid.

AMERICAN READER.

The AMERICAN is glad to comply with "Reader's" suggestion. Representative Charles L. Underhill lives at Winter Hill and he was elected to represent the Twenty-fifth Middlesex District.—EDITOR.

THREE SOULS

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

THREE Souls there were that reached the Heavenly Gate, And gained permission of the Guard to wait. Barred from the bliss of Paradise by sin, They did not ask, or hope, to enter in. "We loved one woman (thus their story ran); We lost her, for she chose another man. So great our love, it brought us to this door; We only ask to see her face once more. Then will we go to realms where we belong, And pay the penalty for doing wrong."

"And were thou friends on earth?" (The Guard spoke thus.) "Nay, we were foes; but Death made friends of us. The dominating thought within each Soul Brought us together, comrades, to this goal. To see her face, and in its radiance bask For one great moment—that is all we ask. And, having seen her, we must journey back. The path we came—a hard and dangerous track." "Wait, then," the Angel said, "beside me here, But do not strive within God's gate to peer Nor converse hold with Spirits clothed in light Who pass this way; thou hast not earned the right."

They waited year on year. Then, like a flame, News of the woman's death from earth-land came. The eager lovers scanned with hungry eyes Each Soul that passed the Gates of Paradise. The well-beloved face in vain they sought. Until one day, the Guardian Angel brought A message to them. "She has gone," he said, "Down to the lower regions of the dead; Her chosen mate went first; so great her love she has resigned the joys that wait above To dwell with him, until perchance some day, Absolved from sin, he seeks the Better Way."

Silent, the lovers turned. The pitying Guard Said: "Stay (the while his hand the door unbarred). There waits for thee no darker grief or woe; Enter the Gates, and all God's glories know. But be ready for so great a bliss. Pause for a moment and take heed of this: The dearest treasure by each mortal lost Lies yonder, when the Threshold has been crossed, And thou shalt find within that Sacred Place The shining wonder of her worshipped face. All that is past is over a troubled dream. Go forward now and accept the Fact Supreme."

Then clothed like Angels, fitting their estate, Three Souls went singing, singing through God's Gate.

THE ISLE OF STONE

By CHART PITT

N EATH the palm-tree's shade the herons wade, And the wild flamingo hides. The drying fish lie in the scented spray, Where the hungry cormorant rides. The shadows creep from the head-land steep, When the wind blows off the shore; But they fling their wrath o'er the mermaid's path, When the angry typhoons roar.

The parrot calls from the darkness falls And the ruddy twilight glows. She is rooked to rest in her silken nest, By the arm of the restless Trades. The wreckage rides mid the deadly tides, Where the long, green combers roll, And are beat to suds on the coral studs That mark the treacherous shoal.

Like Gods of Stone, where the sea-winds moan, The maimed seamen stand; Their flinty eyes glare at the skies, While the non-circus sails each hand. With a dreamlike sleep while the ages creep, O'er the curse-infested isles, They hear the beat of the surfs wild feet, Along the voiceless miles.
